100,000 Strong in the Americas

In March 2011, President Barack Obama launched "100,000 Strong in the Americas," an initiative to increase international study in Latin America and the Caribbean. The purpose of "100,000 Strong in the Americas" is to foster region-wide prosperity through greater international exchange of students, who are our future leaders and innovators. The Department of State is reaching out to diverse institutions throughout the United States including Historically Black Colleges and Universities, Hispanic-serving institutions, Native American Tribal colleges, and community colleges.

The U.S. Embassy welcomes Dr. Randy Glean

Dr. Glean is Director of International Services at the Midwestern State University in Wichita Falls, Texas. He created and established the Caribbean Recruitment Program on his campus that recruited over 1100 Caribbean students to Midwestern State University in the past nineteen years. He also created programs in southern and western Africa, and in southeast Asia as well as placed students in more than 40 US universities. His recruits over the years include over 120MD's; 5 JD's; 24 PhD's; and over 400 master's degrees in various disciplines including engineering, computer science, accounting geosciences, biomedical sciences and behavioral sciences.

Dr. Glean will discuss the various why's, where's and how's of studying in the United States. Come and explore with us the possibilities, get answers to your questions, and find out how to build a strong foundation for your future with a U.S.-degree.
